GC Branch Library Avoids Being Cut From County Budget

The Glencarlyn Branch Library has survived another Arlington County budget that could potentially have closed the facility.

The County Board did not include what County Manager Mark Schwartz, called an "optional proposal to eliminate services at Glencarlyn" in its 2020 financial plan, adopted April 23.

Board Member Libby Garvey said over the next year, the county needs to "take a holistic look at what exactly the library of the 21st century is going to look like" — and include the public in the process.

Board Chairman Christian Dorsey said April 2 there will be further discussions with staff and the Schwarz about the future of the Glencarlyn Library in the context of delivering services at the west end of Columbia Pike.

Board members now understand "how critical Glencarlyn Library is to the many communities that need it most," said Julie Lee, president of the Glencarlyn Citizens' Association.

The library can play a "vital role in the development and enrich Glencarlyn seems to be blooming babies.

Dozens of children and their parents came to GCA's first ever Spring Fun event at the library (r. Owen Hondel, 2, displays his Easter Eggs). Master Gardener Judy Funderburk assisted the little ones in planting vegetable and sunflower seeds.

The children painted and decorated their flower pots.

Librarian Clea Counts read stories and a big banner welcoming spring was made. Then the children headed over to Carlin Hall for a big Egg Hunt. It was a wonderful community event. Hopefully the first of many this year.

Wheels to Africa, GCA election

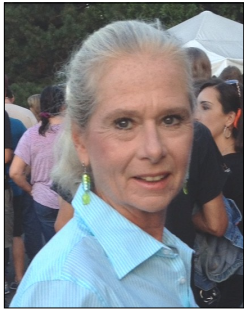

Monday, May 6

Glencarlyn resident Dixie Duncan will talk about Wheels to Africa (WTA) at the upcoming GCA meeting, Monday, May 6, 7:30 p.m. in Carlin Hall. Wheels to Africa is a volunteer 501(c) 3 organization found by Duncan's son Winston, that collects bicycles for needy communities in Africa and America. It is also a platform for developing youth leaders. WTA seeks to perpetuate a commitment to aid those who are less fortunate.

GCA will also hold elections for GCA officers and committee members.

United We Stand

By Julie Lee

President, Glencarlyn Citizens' Association

What a month it has been!! Our community spent weeks forcefully united in defense of our library. Many of us came together on the library patio to welcome Spring. (You can read about both these events on the front page of this Village View).... And Virginia won the NCAA basketball championship!

Whether in struggle or celebration, it is gratifying to see our neighborhood come together with such a sense of community. I hope this is something we can build on. Thank you to the many people who took time to write powerful emails and letters to the County Board. It is a testament to the love we have for our library, and the importance of keeping it open- always.

I was overwhelmed with the turnout of young, beautiful families at our Spring Fun. There were so many babies, dozens of excited little ones planting and painting and hunting for eggs. Introductions were made and hopefully new friendships formed by both children and adults. When we come together we can make things happen and do good.

Soon we will embark on a community project to clean up and improve the park end of 1st St S. This is an idea that came out of our Neighborhood Conservation Survey last fall. We will continue to closely watch County plans for the Virginia Hospital Center (VHC) Property on Carlin Springs Rd. GCA is forcefully calling for a community engagement process before the razing of the existing structures, and we will continue to monitor that situation. Our recently organized tree committee is working to preserve and protect our priceless large trees and increase our tree canopy. There IS power in numbers.

Our biggest and best neighborhood gathering is fast approaching. Glencarlyn Days are June 7-8, with some new and exciting activities planned for Friday night. We hope this will encourage more families to attend both Friday night and Saturday events. No need to worry about cooking or picking up something for a potluck. We are having a Friday night Community BBQ, where all of the food is provided. There will be fun activities for all and free ice cream for the kids.

Please plan to attend the memorial dedication in honor of David Backus in the Library Garden, immediately following the Saturday parade.

In closing I want to acknowledge and thank neighbor and attorney Eric Anderson. Eric researched Gen. Burdett's will and the library trust document and provided us with valuable information. And he did this pro bono. By the way, Eric is a Virginia grad. Did I mention that UVA won the NCAA basketball championship? WAHOOWA!!!

Village View Editor Sought

Glencarlyn residents at an April 2 budget hearing said that the manager did not consider other important uses and services of the branch.

Those include internet access, meeting space for tutoring, a gathering place for community events, and access to books and wifi for students who might not have access to such services.

Mark your calendars and plan to attend the memorial dedication in honor of David Backus. The ceremony, appropriately part of Glencarlyn Days activities, will be in the Library Garden, on Saturday, June 8, at approximately noon — immediately following the Glencarlyn Day parade.

Backus, who died Dec 12, 2016., was a native of Glencarlyn, where members of his family have lived since the 1890s. He was active in Glencarlyn Citizens’ Association affairs and served as GCA president. He also wrote a popular column for The Village View, Remembering Glencarlyn, about his life and times in the neighborhood.

Parking Lot Beds at Library Get Major Re-do

By Wendy Mills
Master Gardener

Master gardeners at the Glencarlyn Library have been renovating the garden beds along the parking lot. As the growing season progresses, local residents will see dozens of new plantings and a more intentional, holistic design that highlights native plants.

The parking lot beds have evolved over the years to include an eclectic collection of native and non-native perennial shrubs, flowers, grasses and bulbs, many installed by interns as part of their Master Gardener certification.

Over the years, the beds have changed. Sections have become shady as the oaks and sweet gum in the cemetery have grown. In the beds themselves, plants have matured, some have become aggressive, reseeding liberally, while others have underperformed or died due to the challenging conditions—cars, foot traffic and intense weather.

The renovation underway will honor the past by incorporating a selection of plantings from each of the intern beds into a new design that emphasizes complementary and contrasting swaths of colors, textures and shapes across the length of the parking lot. Once completed, plants found in eastern woodland, meadow and cottage garden landscapes will be on view with appropriate signage.

Helianthus divaricatus & Solidago caesia

Zizia aurea—new ground cover

Blazing Star

Highlights from the new garden plan, a copy of which will be available in the educational box on the garden patio, include:

- New structural plants: Ceanothus americanus (New Jersey tea), awarded 2019 Wildflower of the year by the Virginia Native Plant Society; Itea virginica 'Merlot' (Virginia sweetspire 'Merlot') and Comptonia peregrina (sweet fern).

- Edibles: Asparagus, low bush blueberries, okra and rhubarb.

- Grasses: Schizachyrium scoparium (little bluestem), Tridens flavus (purpletop grass) and Elymus hystrix (bottlebrush grass).

- Three types of blazing star: L. spicata (dense blazing star), L. scariosa (blazing star) and L. pilosa (grass-leaf blazing star).

- New ground covers: Zizia aurea (golden Alexander), Conoclinium coelestinum (blue mist-flower) and Phlox subulata (moss phlox).

Plants have been selected with an eye to creating a welcoming environment for birds, butterflies, pollinators and other wildlife.

Newcomer sweet fern, for example, supports 64 species of caterpillars—the larval stage of butterflies and moths—which are nutrient dense foods that provide birds with a huge proportion of their diets.

Funding for renovating the parking lot beds is possible thanks to money raised from the library garden's annual Spring Celebration and Autumnfest and the generosity of master gardener volunteers and community members.

Glencarlyn Children's Librarian Reassigned to Westover Library

Clea Counts, children's librarian at Glencarlyn Branch Library since last September, has been transferred to the Westover Branch.

The Glencarlyn community is "confused and outraged" by the transfer, GCA President Julie Lee said in an April 4 message to Diane Kresh, Arlington County Public Library director.

"Just since she arrived in September, she has held 57 programs, compared to 29 last year, with 1200 attendees vs. 640 — all heavily attended by residents from other neighborhoods," Lee said

Kresh replied in a message that "We regularly transfer staff at all levels among library locations for a variety of reasons."

"Another experienced, full-time children's librarian will begin work at Glencarlyn the day after Clea's transfer to Westover," she said. "There will be no lapse in service to the Glencarlyn branch."

Lubber Run Farmers Market to Launch its Second Season

By Robert Swennes
Director, Field to Table

The Lubber Run Farmers Market, soon to open its second season on Saturday, April 27, is part of an effort to encourage healthy eating throughout Northern Virginia by Arlington-based non-profit Field-to-Table, Inc.: <https://field2table.org/>.

The market was launched in late May 2018 by the Arlington Forest and Buckingham Community civic associations following a presentation by Field-to-Table. Located at the Barrett Elementary School, 4401 N. Henderson Road, it will run Saturdays 8 a.m. until noon, from April 27 through November.

At least 16 vendors are expected to participate. Offerings range from fruits and vegetables to meat, eggs, bread, and locally brewed coffee. There are also French pastries, and ethnic cuisines that have gained a strong following among market-goers.

Produce changes with the seasons. For example, asparagus gives way to strawberries, followed in succession by corn, cantaloupe, peaches, and apples. See the produce calendar at:

<https://lubberrunfarmersmarket.org/produce-calendar/>.

Those interested in serving on the market committee should email info@field2table.org. Please put Lubber Run Farmers Market in the message heading.

Remove Invasive Plants at Long Branch

Join other volunteers in removing invasive plants at Long Branch Nature Center the third Sunday of each month from 2 – 4 p.m. This program is coordinated by Steve Young, Glencarlyn resident and Arlington master naturalist. All volunteers are welcome and don't need any prior experience," he said. "walk down to the Nature Center and look for the group gathering in the parking lot area. Invasive plants are non-native weeds that cause harm to native plants and wildlife. One of the worst is English Ivy, Young said. For the most part, the invasive plants are pulled up or cut, and incidental trash also is collected. For more information go to:

How's the Market?

While many markets across the US have slowed, Arlington's market is still on fire, and buyers are competing over the best selections of what is available. The short supply of single family homes has remained lower this year compared to historical trends. Prices have increased it's a brutal market out there for buyers right now. There are still bidding wars in many sectors of the DC Metro market although Arlington remain one of the hottest areas. The homes attracting bidding wars typically fall into two recurring categories — total fixer uppers priced low and properly priced homes that have been updated and show in pristine condition. Today's buyers are highly discerning and prefer a home that is totally updated and move in ready condition regardless of its age. After pushing their maximum buying power in a high cost area, they don't have any cash left for improvements, and they don't have any cash left for improvements, and they are anxious about taking on projects for which they know nothing about. Buyers also seek locations that fit their lifestyle (close to public transportation, their job, shopping or children's schools.) The fixer uppers are snapped up by builders and investors who can pay cash.

Is a move on the horizon for you? For sellers, we offer guidance on preparing your home for the market, walking through with our preferred contractors to provide you with a range of repair estimates. Whatever the scope of work might be, we can help owners manage the projects since most people are busy or don't have the expertise to manage a project. Our strategies, market knowledge, and industry reputation help to position a seller with winning outcome. Let's get together to discuss your situation and discover how you can save time and money!

students, including some from the county's most economically disadvantaged populations. Martinez said officials and teachers from those schools (Kenmore Middle, Carlin Springs and Campbell Elementary) attested to the library branch's value to their students.

She quoted a teacher who said, 'Many of our students come from families without cars and this is the only walkable resource they have — especially for the students that don't Charlie Robertson cited the educational benefits of the branch he enjoyed growing up and said he hoped to pass those benefits on to his son.

Mary Beth Corcoran said she was "shocked that a world class community like Arlington would even consider closing a library."

On another issue, Lee asked the board why Clea Counts, children's librarian at Glencarlyn, was transferred to Westover after less than a year at Glencarlyn. (see story on page 6).
